This video will at first seem to have nothing to with arachnids or other arthropods but in fact it's really relevant in our world today: If we don't take care of our planet we will lose lots of arthropod species, not to mention our planets biodiversity as whole. But on the contrary to what many people seem to think this task does not start with the politicians, it starts with our own individual choices and actions.

So enjoy this video and share it with others.
